Halleluiah! I think we have finally made it to the backside of winter. I am so excited for Daylight Savings Time and patches of ground are finally showing through the never ending white landscape. This extra hour is fulfilling my craving for more light, warmer air and I am hearing a cacophony of twittering, thawed-out birds. It's the only twittering that gets my attention!!

I have enjoyed painting full-time in Minnesota throughout the winter in my new, expanded studio. It is great to have more room to spread out. This expanded space gives me options to paint larger canvases and to set up and work on more pieces simultaneously. I've been working on five new Still Lives, Figures in the Seascape and an experimental piece that is inspired from a trip to Rio de Janeiro, Brazil; plus a few other things. Some works are quite large compared to what I have done in the past and it has been fun to use huge brushes and to try to work at a quicker pace.

Before the Holidays, I was invited by the Nina Bliese Gallery to present an Exhibition of my current works in one of their large galleries in downtown Minneapolis. It is a beautiful, street level gallery with huge windows where abundant natural light floods in. It is an honor and a privilege to exhibit in this fabulous gallery and so many thanks to Nina Bliese for this special invitation.

The Exhibition entitled, "Dimensions of Solitude," opens Monday, April 12th and will be displayed until Friday, May 28th, 2010. I personally invite you to the Opening Reception and Artist Talk on Thursday, April 15th from 5-8 pm. The Artist's Talk begins at 6:30. Come relax, view what I've been up to this winter and let us treat you to hors d'oeuvres and wine while you stroll around the Nina Bliese Gallery. You can find directions by going to ninabliesegallery.com.

Check out my website at terriemyers.com. You will get a preview of some of the new pieces in the Exhibition there. Also, it is time for computer "Spring Cleaning" when I update everyone's contact information. If you have any questions or have contact information that needs to be updated, please send me an email at info@terriemyers.com.

I look forward to seeing you in April and meanwhile, enjoy the tiny hints of Spring!
